Dear Readers,

This is the 6th Edition of the Ashtabula Local Food Guide and the first one we have done without the skillful and steady hand of Meghan Davis, a founding member of the Food Guide Committee. Meghan was part of the original group of Master Gardeners that initiated this project and was responsible for doing the heavy lifting on the layout as well as steering the group's activities with her well honed project management skills.

Unfortunately, Meghan passed away last year leaving behind a legacy of service to her community- not only in local foods but in her work on the Ashtabula Suffrage project, The Ohio State Master Gardener Volunteers, the Herb Society of America, the Ashtabula Farmers Market, as well as Honey Hollow Herb Farm- a business she and her husband Rees ran for many years.

Meghan was an ardent supporter of small farms, local food, and small businesses. She would go out of her way to patronize a new farmers market or local business. She was often a first customer for new vendors at the farmers market and always had an encouraging word to say to new entrepreneurs.

We know it would make Meghan tremendously happy to see this guide continue on into the future and we are proud to be a part of the group to carry this project forward. We dedicate this edition in her honor-
To Meghan Davis!

That said, here are some updates you will see in the 6th Edition:

- Icons added for veteran owned and certified organic farms
- Icon added for farms offering agritourism activities
- Added 13 new farms, 1 new retail listing, & several honey producers
- Reorganized the retail section to only include off farm stores
- On farm markets were moved to be included with the farm listings
- Included a much requested map with a link to an online version on page 23 thanks to the Auditor's Office GIS department.

We hope you enjoy this year's Food Guide! As always thank you for your support of local food.

Sincerely,

The Ashtabula County Local Food Guide Team
Kathy Presciano Ann Rapose Julie Wayman

Ashtabula County Farmers' Markets

Endless Local Food Choices

All Ashtabula County farmers' markets are outdoor markets promoting locally grown produce and locally made food products. Each market has its own rules about what types of vendors can participate, such as craft makers and non-profit organizations. Markets are held rain or shine but may be cancelled or closed early because of lightning, wind or drenching rain.

Tips for Buying at a Farmers' Market

- Bring cash in smaller denominations. Some vendors may take credit cards or electronic payments.
- Come early. Popular items often sell out quickly.
- If you see unfamiliar produce, ask how to store, prepare, cook and eat it.
- Bring a cooler for your purchases if you won't be returning home quickly.
- Strike up a conversation with the vendors so you get to know them, and they get to know you.

Honey Producers

Ashtabula County Beekeepers Association

Interest in beekeeping and honey production has exploded in Ashtabula County! Many honey producers are members of the Ashtabula County Beekeepers Association, which was founded in 1889. The organization promotes the scientific study of beekeeping, pollination, honey production, marketing and disease control.

Members are active with beginning and advanced beekeeping classes, field days, monthly meetings, informative newsletters, an information table at the Ashtabula County fair, Ag Day graders and more. For more information, find on the web at ashtabulacountybeekeepers.org or on Facebook at: www.facebook.com/AshtabulaCountyBeekeepersAssoc

Restaurants & Wineries

Many independently owned restaurants in Ashtabula county source local meat, products, and produce during the growing season. Ask your chef or server which menu items have been made with local ingredients. Creating demand gives restaurants feedback that eating locally is important to their patrons.

Ashtabula County has wineries producing award-winning wines from the Lake Erie and Grand River Valley growing regions. The following wineries grow at least some of their own grapes:

- Buccia Winery
- Emerine Estates
- Ferrante Winery & Ristorante
- Grand River Cellars Winery & Restaurant
- Harpersfield Vineyard
- Hundley Cellars
- Kosicek Vineyards
- Laurello Vineyards
- Laurentia Vineyard and Winery
- M Cellars
- Markko Vineyard
- South River Vineyard
- The Lakehouse Inn Winery
- Virant Family Winery

To explore local restaurants and wineries on the web, see the Ashtabula County Visitors Bureau at visitashtabulacounty.com

You can participate in their wine pass program here: Grand River Valley Wine Pass | Ashtabula County Visitors Bureau \(visitashtabulacounty.com\)

Dorset Community Food Forest Project

The Dorset Community Food Forest is a 7 acre plot at the Dorset Township Community center that mimicks a native forest– growing large fruit and nut trees, fruit bearing shrubs, perennial and annual vegetables along with culinary and medicinal herbs. The food is free to anyone in the community for home use, as well as seeds and cuttings (shrubs with permission) to start your home orchards and food plots. We welcome anyone to participate and to enjoy. Events and progress are published on facebook.com/DorsetFoodForest

The mission of My Neighborhood Collaborative “is bringing people and resources together to help revitalize and rebuild a stronger neighborhood where people want to live, work, play and prosper.”

Farm Share

As part of this mission, a large community garden is maintained by volunteers at Clifford Kadon Presidential Park at 5835 Madison Ave. in Ashtabula. The garden produces fresh vegetables available through their markets and Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) program. In addition, garden volunteers can use their work time in the garden to pay for weekly shares. For more information, call Mary Graves at 440-687-4921.

Ashtabula County Ag Day

Where does your food come from? Each May all first graders in Ashtabula County discover the answer when they are invited to get up-close with farm animals, crops, fruits and vegetables at the county's youth agricultural education event called Ag Day.

More than 1000 first graders learn about local food, bees & honey, milk, tomato growing, maple syrup and more from 300 volunteers of agricultural organizations. To learn more about ag day, how to donate, or volunteer, please visit: www.go.osu.edu/agdayashtabula

Ashtabula County Community Seed Libraries

Seed Libraries house vegetable, herb, fruit and flower seeds for public use. The aim is to help make healthy food accessible and to build up a community seed stock of locally adapted seeds. Currently seed libraries are located in all of the county's libraries. Visit <https://redbeetrow.com/seed-libraries> for a full list of locations and information about seed saving.

Ashtabula County Junior Fair Market Animal Sale

Saturday, August 12, 2023 10:00 am

(registration at 9:00 am)

Ashtabula Fairgrounds– in the Show Barn

The Market Animal Sale benefits 4-H and FFA youth who raise beef, pigs, sheep, goats, dairy, rabbits and poultry for their annual projects. They learn animal husbandry skills of proper care and feeding of livestock. Their finished projects are then sold at a live auction with the highest bidder purchasing the animal. The proceeds go to the 4-H or FFA youth who in turn uses this money to pay for project expenses and to further their education.

Ashtabula Local Food

Ashtabula Local Food (ALF) is a clearinghouse for information about local food activity across the county. It is comprised of individual stakeholders from a wide cross section of the community including local food farmers, local food enthusiasts, educators, activists, farmers market managers, gardeners and more. We meet monthly to discuss what is happening individually and collectively in local food and discuss projects that would benefit our community. For more information visit our website www.ashtabulalocalfood.org or email us at: ashtabulalocalfood@gmail.com

Northeast Ohio Pollinator Society (NEOPS)

NEOPS is a non-profit organization started by the Ashtabula County Beekeepers Association, Ashtabula County Master Gardeners, Ashtabula OSU Extension and Ashtabula SWCD. The organization's goal is to educate the public about the critical role pollinators play in our food system and how individuals can assist in building up pollinator numbers by adding habitat. They do this through a winter webinar series and a summer pollinator festival. More information can be found at www.go.osu.edu/neops or Contact: Suzanne Westlake 440-576-4946

The Ohio State University Master Gardener Volunteers of Ashtabula County

Master Gardeners conduct a Hotline during the growing season to answer home gardening questions. For 2022 the Hotline is staffed on Monday from 9:00 am to noon and Thursday from 1:00 pm to 4:00 pm. Contact the Hotline by calling the OSU Extension office at 440-576-9008 or visiting the office at 39 Wall St. in Jefferson.

In fond remembrance of Meghan Davis
March 22, 1957– October 2, 2022

It's my turn to be planted
Put out to seed again
While the fruits of my earthly labors
Flourish in the sun and rain

It's a wonderful day to be planted
In rich, deep loamy soil
A natural bed, for tired gardener's head
With green fingered hands of toil

Please plant a tree or bush for me
To celebrate a gardener's life ways
I strove to enrich the world with beauty
Over many, many gardening days.

Eat with the seasons by purchasing local food at these peak times.
